Albert Casals is a young boy who moves in a wheelchair since he suffered leukaemia when he was 5 years old. A circumstance that hasn't prevented him from making his dream come true: to travel around the world.

And to do it his way. Without money, without companions, without luggage. He has nothing but his imagination and his courage.

“Little world” will show us his biggest and craziest challenge: to reach exactly the other side of the planet. ¿Is it possible to cross the earth in this conditions?

Mixing the techniques of the self-shoot with the traditional documentary methods, we will get to know who this young boy is, his love story, his special philosophy of life and his parents' way to raise a child.

We will see how Albert and his girlfriend Anna go from Barcelona to an isolated lighthouse in New Zealand. Or how they fail in the attempt. The journey (and the film) can be considered sheer madness, a lovely romance or an epic adventure. Perhaps a bit of everything.
